Craig,
I forgot to mention that the wholesalers are also part of the Pain Care Forum REMS Task Force through their trade group HDMA.

Craig,
In the meeting we had with companies, Purdue, Endo, Covidian, Abbott, King, Collegium, Roxanne and J&J ( and antitrust counsel) were represented either directly or through their consultants.
We signed a letter from Pain Care Forum organizations that was sent to FDA, along with Abbott, Endo, Collegium and 20 other organizations from pharmacy, medicine, patients, hospice, state medical boards and others. Also, we are participating with the Pain Care Forum REMS Task Force with additional companies Covidian, Roxanne, J&J, and Cephalon. It is possible that I am missing a company or two, but think that is it. The Task Force has also grown to many more than the 20 other organizations.
That group has been contacted by Dr. Throckmorton and expects to meet with FDA.
They are trying to come up with a specific proposal to offer to FDA.
Please let me know if you have additional questions.
Regards,
Burt

Importance: High

Do you feel comfortable with me providing this info? If so, can you provide me with a list of companies under and under which coalition (group) they fall? I can then extract and send to FDA.

Lisa,

Purdue is eager to act on Dr. Jenkin's request for a sponsor to take the lead and organize a follow-up meeting on development of a "Class" REMS. A list of March 3rd meeting participants and companies would help to facilitate the process and minimize the risk that we'd inadvertently omit an individual or an organization from subsequent communications / meetings. Contact information, preferably email addresses would help to expedite the process.

Thanks and regards,

Craig

Lisa,

Thanks for the meeting earlier this week, and yes, we're both US citizens. We were wondering if it's safe to assume we won't be receiving an agenda?

Regards,

Craig

Craig,

For security purposes....

Are you and David both US citizens? If not, I'll need you to fill out a form to get clearance for the meeting.
